TERRIBLE LIFE IN GERMAN TYPHUS CAMP

There was not a regular bed in the place and the mattresses were filthy and uncomfortable. Typhus is essentially a filth disease and to combat it successfully cleaning materials and changes of clothing are prime necessities. Many of the men had only the ragged remnants of their uniforms, their great coats having been lost or taken from them by the guards while some had to go about wrapped in a blanket with strips of blankets in the place of boots. Soap had been sent to the prisoners from England, but the men were not permitted to receive any of their packages until Mr. Gerard, the American ambassador, made his inspection of the camp after the epidemic was over.

"The physical misery and discomfort of the camp would have made it a place of horror without any epidemic. Many of the huts went without coal for as long as a week at a time in the midst of freezing weather as the coal contractors, knowing there was no authority within the camp to see that proper deliveries were made, frequently failed to bring any fuel. The lighting was always insufficient and this added to the depression already felt in even the best managed prison camps. The room for recreation was decidedly limited and footballs sent from England to the men were withheld from them, and it was not until March that the men were able to get even the elementary exercise of kicking a ball about. The first we got were three sent to me by Ambassador Gerard. He promised to send these when he visited the camp and when they failed to arrive on time I wrote to him asking why and very shortly afterwards they arrived. I am sure that the delay was due to their being held up by the prison authorities. When I threw these footballs to a group of men gathered about my hut a mad rush was made for them, and the prisoners for the first time in over a year had a chance to indulge in a game of any sort. Later the footballs from England were released to the men now get some exercise as well as relief from the deadly monotony of a crowded camp.

CONDITIONS NOT CONTINGENT ON THE CONDUCT OF ANY OTHER BELLIGERENT

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, May 9.—America's latest note to Germany on submarines has gone. The text shows the United States accepts the German proposals that submarine warfare will be altered to conform with the recognized rules of international law. The note insists that Germans must not consider her requests for the rights of Americans on the high seas contingent on the conduct of any other belligerent with whom the United States may be negotiating.

PASSAGE OF UNDER-ROUND WATER BILL

acre tracts. In this way it is estimated that Railroad Valley alone would provide homes for a nice addition to the population. Nothing can be done with the bill, providing it passes, unless there are means of bringing the settler and capital together that they may work to common end in developing. Good judges say the land can be made worth from $40 to $100 per acre with an outlay of from $10 to $12 an acre thus furnishing the settler with an incentive to come here with his family. The Railroad Valley Land and Water company will be financed by Bailey and associates to engage in professional drilling operations. This company will drill the wells for the settlers either for cash or deferred payments carrying six per cent interest extending over a period of ten years. Without some such concern it is said that it would be well night impossible to attract settlers as no one coming here to live on a desert entry would be furnished with enough idle money to develop the underflow.

Another feature of the proposed company in which Messrs. Bailey, Reveal and Barndt are interested in another central company which has for its object providing farmers with an absolute market for whatever they may raise in the way of alfalfa or feedstuffs suitable for live stock. None of the settlers is compelled to accept these contracts but, if they do, they will find a positive market for a period of ten years for all produce which will be taken over by the parent company and used for raising live stock.

AMUSEMENTS

BUTLER THEATER

Miss Whiting, the clever little entertainer, was greeted by her many Tonopah friends last evening, and by their generous applause showed they were glad to see this popular little favorite back once more. Miss Whiting will appear for the last time tonight in new songs and all lovers of good singing are urged to be on hand. The feature picture this evening will be Pauline Frederick, the celebrated stage star, in the great dramatic sensation "Zaza," the stage production of which brought undying fame to Mrs. Leslie Carter. It was said by New York dramatic critics at the time Mrs. Carter made her debut in the role of the French music hall singer, that she was the only woman on the American stage who could have successfully played the part. Deprived of the important medium of voice, Miss Frederick must rely utterly upon the power of pantomime, but those who have seen the great screen artist in her wonderful emotional interpretations, are the first to declare that Miss Frederick is the first woman who can approach this stupendous task with a justifiable expectation of success. It is one of the most exacting roles ever created, and shall remain to the credit of Pauline Frederick that she has made it the master work of her brilliant career. The preliminary reel will be Burton Holmes' travel pictures, "Feeling Big Trees in California." Tomorrow, a screen production of famous Broadway success, "New York," featuring the celebrated Florence Reed. Also, The Whiting Comedy company, and Bulkers Circus, a wonderful trained animal act, not a moving picture.
